

SMASH ON JAW STOPS BANDIT IN INDIANA CITY

Crook Sought For 2 Years Nabbed With Grip Full Of Explosive "Soup."

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 19.—(By Associated Press.)—Gerald Chapman, to whom crimes ranging from robbery to murder are attributed, and who was arrested at Muncie, Ind., will be held for the warden of the Atlanta Federal prison, Alexander G. Cavins, U. S. district attorney, said today. Chapman escaped from the Atlanta institution in March, 1923, a few months after he had been sentenced to serve twenty-five years in connection with the $2,400,000 mail truck robbery in New York in 1921.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 19.—(By International News.)—Nursing a swollen jaw and plainly showing the effects of the first night's sleep in nearly two years on a hard jail cell, Gerald Chapman, notorious desperado and mail robber, awoke in Marion county jail today ready to face the United States commissioner who was expected to order him returned to Atlanta Federal prison immediately.

The deflagrated jaw was a reminder of Chapman's battle with detectives at Muncie, Ind., Sunday, when he attempted to shoot Detectives Harry Brown and Marvin Collins. Later the detectives and Postal Inspector A. S. Kelley took the fugitive to the Marion county jail. Chapman's arrest ended a nationwide search which began at the Atlanta prison, where he escaped in 1923, while serving a 25-year sentence for complicity in a $2,000,000 New York City mail robbery. The notorious bandit also faced a murder charge in connection with the slaying of a Mount Vernon, N. Y., patrolman, Dec. 18, 1924. Rewards for this capture were $4,000.

Federal authorities today said Chapman probably would not be telegraphed until he finishes his sentence in the Atlanta prison. "Clinging to the cell bars with a fierce look in his eyes, for the 'pal' who turned me up," Chapman today refused to discuss the patrolman's slaying.

Chapman drew freely on the money cache of the New York mail robbery to describe the "Buddy who peached."

"Blood money, that's what it was," he declared. He then unleashed a stream of profanity and emphasis as he explained the role of the man who "tipped off" Muncie police. Authorities withheld the man's name.

When arrested Chapman carried a satchel containing a large quantity of nitro-glycerin and jewelry which police believe may be a part of the New York loot. He also had more than $4,000 in cash.

Neither the motorist nor the boy saw the other until the sled was almost under the car. Mr. Busenbark quickly turned the front wheels and brought the automobile to a stop.

But as if timed to a second, the sled slid smoothly under the automobile, passing between the front and rear wheels so quickly that Barney's junior was uninjured. Mr. Busenbark rushed over to see if the boy was injured. Later he reported the incident to the police.

Stevens recently escaped serving a 30-day sentence in Waterloo when he made good a number of checks given merchants there and promised to leave that city. He was alleged to have operated in the upriver town under the name of "E. L. Cole," purchasing a stove, vacuum cleaner, rug and washing machine at different places, giving checks in excess of the purchase price in each case and obtaining the balance in cash. The trick was discovered when the articles were delivered to persons who proved they had never given the orders.

The methods in the Waterloo and Waverly cases were similar to those used here where a man under the name of "William Collins" bought a washing machine at the balance in cash. The Stevens and wife were arrested at the hardware store.

The Stevens gave Waterloo and Marshalltown as their home. Police here have not received notice of the arrest from Waverly officials.

MARRIAGE OR JAIL, HE TAKES HOUSEGOW

F. B. Sweet, Jewelry Salesman, Nabbed When He Calls On Local Woman Who Lent Him $1,000.

"If I marry her, she says she'll drop the case," said Frank B. Sweet, local jewelry salesman, talking from behind the bars at the police station yesterday where he was boarding, following his arrest Saturday night on a charge of embezzling $1,000 from Mrs. Mary Horrice, local seamstress.

Sweet was nabbed by the police when he returned to the city Saturday from a business trip to St. Paul and Chicago and went to call on Mrs. Horrice, to whom he is said to have been attentive.

Sweet, however, did not commit himself yesterday. He declared the case is in the hands of his attorney and that it will likely be settled up. "It's all a mistake and a misunderstanding," he said.

According to Mrs. Horrice's story at the time she swore out an information against Sweet, the latter had indicated he intended to marry her and so when he said he needed some money to close a business deal, she gladly lent him the thousand berries. Sweet declared Mrs. Horrice did not ask any security and so he did not make out a note to indicate the loan.

The transaction was made several months ago and matters went along smoothly until he left the city in December. Sweet said he told Mrs. Horrice he would return soon, but in the meantime she had filed charges against him. Ignorant of the fact that he was accused of any crime, Sweet returned to the city and went to visit Mrs. Horrice.

Sweet was to be arraigned in Justice G. S. Lightner's court today.

Backed By Truth

You have heard people read an advertisement and then say, "I don't believe it."

Once on a time they might have been right, for dishonest people have advertised. But there are two good reasons why practically all advertising today is honest.

One reason is that no good newspaper will print dishonest advertising.

The other reason is that experience has proven that dishonest advertising hurts the advertiser far more than it does the buyer of the goods advertised.

The fact is easy to understand. A person may be dishonest in a quiet, sneaky way, for a long time and never actually be caught at it. But an advertisement is a combination agreement and guarantee.

A merchant or manufacturer inserts an advertisement in a paper. That advertisement carries certain statements and certain claims for the goods mentioned. To speak such statements and claims is one thing; but to print them, and sign your name to them, and to send this out for everyone to read, is giving the public a guarantee.

That's why it will pay you to read advertisements and buy advertised goods. Every advertisement is your guarantee of value.
