Cod Liver Oil Now in Tasteless Tablets

Greatest Flesh Builder

No more will weak, thin, unfortunate children cry in protest when the nasty, fishy-tasting, horrible-smelling cod liver oil is brought out.

Medical science progresses rapidly, and now your child at your drug-gist's real, genuine cod liver oil in sugar-coated tablets that young and old can take with ease and pleasure.

One woman gained fifteen pounds in five weeks, according to her own doctor—another ten pounds in three weeks. A very sickly child, aged nine, twelve months now plays with other children and has a good appetite.

Just ask for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets, Hoxson Drug Co., Montrose Pharmacy, Floral Pharmacy or any good druggist will tell you that they are wonderful flesh and health builders. Only 60 cents for 60 tablets, and don't forget that they are wonder workers for feeble old folks.

Be sure and get McCoy's, the original and genuine.—Advertisement

Of course, doctors have been prescribing cod liver oil in tablets under another name for several years. It is only of late that one can walk into a drug store and get a box of these flesh-producing tablets just as easy as a little of cough syrup.

Thin, run-down, anemic men, women and children who need to grow strong and take on flesh are advised to get a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets, and if you don't gain 5 pounds in 30 days, just get your money back.

Illinois Central System Tells How Railroads

View the Problem of Prosperity

Our country cannot live half prosperous and the other half bordering on poverty. We cannot have real prosperity unless all kinds of business and all classes of our population share in it. None of us can afford to benefit at the expense of others. We must work together and profit together.

All branches of economic activity are inter-dependent. We need prosperous factories in order that raw materials may be turned into finished products most efficiently and cheaply. We need prosperous farmers and laborers because these influential and productive factors of our population must have money in order to purchase the goods and services which the rest of us have to offer. We need prosperous railroads because no other can render the adequate, efficient service essential to the carrying on of other kinds of business.

The complex economic system under which we deal with one another requires of its component elements, both corporations and individuals, an unselfishness that is commonly characterized by the expression, "Live and let live."

Because they perform a public service that is intimately related to all other kinds of business, the railroads are profoundly conscious of this inter-dependence of all of us for prosperity. The railroads contribute largely to general prosperity through their essential service and their vast expenditures, and they know that the best interest of the public, in turn, is to be found in railway prosperity, for that is what insures continued railway expenditures and adequate and efficient service. The record of railway efficiency in recent years is a record of benefit to the public.

One of the quickest ways to halt general prosperity would be to cripple the railroads. But we do not believe the country stands in danger of that since the public has become better informed on the railway question. Public sentiment toward the railroads has undergone a great change in recent years. There once existed a feeling of hostility and distrust which is now largely gone. Many things have helped to prodge that improvement, including a change in the attitude of railway managements toward the public. The one thing that perhaps has done more than anything else to bring about the change is the wider knowledge of the fact that the railroads perform a vital service, which, in the public interest, must be maintained through allowing them to share in the prosperity they help to create for all.

Railroads are subject to all of the mistakes of policies and practices that other human agencies are subject to. But railway managements are keen to correct abuses and are animated by a sincere desire to do their part to bring about general prosperity. The sincerity of their intentions is attested by their willingness to avail themselves of helpful ideas presented to them by their patrons.

The very nature of the railway business makes those who are engaged in it approach the problem of prosperity from the viewpoint of inter-relationships. The Illinois Central System has sought to prove itself a good neighbor and a good citizen wherever its lines are located. It is found that it has benefited itself the most when it has done its best to contribute to the prosperity of others.

Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.

C. H. MARKHAM,

President Illinois Central System.
