Rickenbacker

A CAR WORTHY OF ITS NAME

"Three Flags" Record Broken

1,558 Miles in 40 Hours, 47 Minutes
Elapsed Time!

And now, Rickenbacker Six with Cannon Ball Baker at the wheel, lowers the longest North-South road record.

This is the famous "Three Flags" run from the Canadian Border to Tia Juana, Mexico,—British Columbia; Washington; Oregon; California; Mexico.

Same car, same driver, which made the great Coast to Coast drive—3106.5 miles in 71 hours 33 minutes, actual driving time—did it.

1,558 miles, in 40 hours, 47 minutes—elapsed time!

Consider that, since 1911 when the first "pathfinder" took weeks to make the drive, one car after another has gone after this much coveted "Three Flags" record.

As roads improved and cars improved still more, each in turn clipped a few minutes off. This record has been lowered and lowered, until weeks were reduced to days—and finally the time came to be computed in hours.

Seemed as if no car—no driver—could lower the record as it has stood for some time now—52 hours 41 minutes.

Remember, this route crosses three mountain ranges—Cascades, Siakiyous and the Tehachapi.

And the road zig-zags back and forth as it climbs—switches back and forth hundreds of times as it descends with steep inclines on the other side.

On one stretch—Grant's Pass—the driver just throws his wheel clear over—then back again, all the way—as the car "chases its own tail" up—and then down—the mountain side.

It's a gigantic game of "crack the whip." Only a car that is a phenomenon in stamina—easy steering and positive in control could stand the strain.

If you have ever driven this route you know!

"4-wheel Brakes made this record," says Baker.

Only a car that could take the steepest up-grades at 45 miles per hour—and 50 on down grades; brakes that could decelerate the speed so quickly as to take the hair-pin turns, in safety, then get away again.

If brakes failed—the precipice was the only alternative.

Rickenbacker mechanical brakes never fail.

When Rickenbacker Six went after that record the few who were "supposed to know" said it couldn't be done.

Road would have to be straightened and leveled first!

But this great car wasn't content to shave seconds or clip minutes off the former record.

It chopped hours off—11 hours and 54 minutes!

Let what car can, lower that! It will have to be some automobile!

Even at the terrific speeds he had to drive on straight stretches, Baker certifies his gasoline mileage was 15 M. P. G.—and 400 miles per gallon on oil. Thanks to the Rickenbacker dilution eliminator.

Does not this test prove that this car possesses all the qualities you desire in your next car?

Power—sustained power; Speed—sustained speed; hill climbing; wonderful acceleration and deceleration. Perfect brakes.

Drive this Rickenbacker Six yourself—it will be a revelation to you.
