

NAB CHICAGO BOYS FOR STEALING CAR

Tipton Authorities Disprove
Story Of Quartet Who Begged Gas, Food Along Way; Youngest-12 Years Old.

Special to The Gazette.

TIPTON, April 27.—Four Chicago youths were brought to Tipton by the town marshal of Lowden Saturday, after they had been reported begging for food and gasoline from farmers along the Lincoln highway east of Lowden.

The boys, who gave their names as Fred Grisham, 17, Joe Greco, 17, Fred Senman, 16, and Frank Logan, 12, said that they were all from Chicago and that the Westcott car which they were driving was the property of their uncle, Frank Cocco, who lives at 1733 West Ohio street, Chicago. Work they said, was scarce in Chicago and they were on their way to Omaha where they hoped to obtain employment. A search revealed the fact that they had no money, were carrying no weapons and no personal property to speak of.

A telegram was forwarded to the address of the uncle in Chicago but it was reported not delivered in Chicago. The boys then wandered in their story and admitted that the car was stolen in Chicago, and that the story regarding their uncle was fictitious.

The boys are being held in jail at Tipton until communications with Chicago police will probably establish the ownership of the car. The boys will likely be sent back to Chicago where charges of theft will be brought against them.

HAMMILL MAY NAME BANK BOARD TUESDAY

Special to The Gazette.

DES MOINES, April 27.—Gov. Hammill is expected to announce Tuesday his selection of the four members, who, with the state superintendent of banking will make up the new state banking board.

Many names have come to the governor as applicants for this board. Hammill, however, has been seeking the men.

The members of the board other than the superintendent of banking will receive no salary but will be allowed ten dollars a day for the time actually engaged in performing their duties as members of the board together with all expenses.

WILLIAMSBURG, April 27.—The Williamsburg high school boys' and girls' choir, after rehearsing at Washington in the southeastern district musical contest, brought back two firsts and one second.

UNCLE WIGGILY'S WEDDING.

Uncle Butter, the goat gentleman, was getting ready one morning to skip over the fields to look for some old, brown paper, which he was very fond of chewing, when he saw Uncle Wiggily hopping up the front path.

"Why, Uncle Wiggily! How stylishly dressed you are today!" bleated the goat gentleman. "Are you going to look for some adventures, with your Sunday clothes on?"

"No," answered Mr. Longears, with a funny little twinkle of his pink nose. "I am going to be married. This is my wedding day."

"You are going to get married?" cried Uncle Butter in surprise. "To whom?"

"To Mrs. Jump, a rabbit widow," answered Uncle Wiggily. "You see, Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy, my muskrat lady housekeeper, is getting rather old, and tired of looking after my hollow stump bungalow. She needs a rest. So I am going to get married, though of course Nurse Jane will live with me and look after me and Mrs. Jump—or, I suppose, I shall have to call her Mrs. Uncle Wiggily in a little while. Come and see me get married."

"I will!" bleated the goat, and then he laughed.

"What are you laughing at?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Oh, something funny I just thought of," answered Uncle Butter. "And now I'll get on my good clothes, for I want to look sleek and proper to see you married. I'll have my hoofs and horns polished."

A little while after that Uncle Wiggily and Mrs. Jump, the rabbit widow, were wedded in a green glade in the woods, by Jack-in-the-Pulpit, and then the newly married couple and their friends went to Uncle Wiggily's bungalow for the wedding breakfast.

"I hope you will be very happy with your wife, Uncle Wiggily!" squeaked Nurse Jane, as she kissed Mr. Longears on the tip of his pink, twinkling nose.

"Thank you, and I want you to live here with us just the same as you lived with me all these years," invited the bunny, and Mrs. Jump, or, rather Mrs. Wiggily as she was now, said the same thing.

Just as they were sitting down to breakfast, Uncle Wiggily noticed the parlor door slowly opening, and a number of little rabbit faces peered out.

"Who are all the little rabbits?" he asked. "There are more of them behind that door than Sammie and Susie Littletail and Daby Buntzy who are they?"

"They are my little rabbit children," laughed the blushing widow bride. "I have been saving them as a surprise for you! Come out, children!"

Out they leaped from behind the door, where they had been hiding—six, eight, ten, twelve—forty-seven, all together.

"My! What—what—a lovely lot of little rabbit children!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily, and he was much surprised. "But I like them!" he cried. "I just love them! Nurse Jane, set places for all of my new bunnies. They were Mrs. Jump's, but now they are mine!"

"Hello, new Daddy!" cried the little boy and girl rabbits to Uncle Wiggily, and they kissed him and hugged him. And then, all of a sudden, when Uncle Wiggily was passing his wife a piece of the wedding cake made of turnips and cabbages, all of a sudden, the bunny gentleman felt a sharp pain in one leg under the table.

"Ouch! Yowch!" he cried, jumping up. "Has the Wondle Wolf come to my wedding breakfast to bite me?"

"No, Uncle Wiggily—I mean Daddy!" cried Nipper, one of the little boy rabbits. "A Wolf didn't bite you. I—now—I just happened to stick a pin in your leg!"

"You stuck a pin in my leg?" cried the surprised Mr. Longears. "What for?"

"I—now—I wanted to see if the pin was sharp," answered Nipper. "And I guess it was—because you jumped like anything!"

"Nipper, Nipper, that was very naughty of you!" said his mother. "Please don't do it again. Will you forgive him this time, Wiggily?" and again she kissed Mr. Longears.

"Yes, I'll forgive him!" said the bunny gentleman, and then he laughed, and so did Uncle Butter. And if the umbrella doesn't go for a walk in the rain and get its ribs wet, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's shower bath.

TO LEARN IF FOREIGN LANGUAGE IS BENEFICIAL

Local teachers of foreign languages are, interested in the announced three-year investigation to be made into the teaching of French, German, Italian and Spanish in the United States, by a committee working under the direction of the American Council on Education.

The committee is supported by an appropriation from the Carnegie Corporation of New York, which is also financing a similar study of teaching foreign languages in Canada.

Besides the statistics to be gathered, a number of tests and experiments will be carried out to ascertain how many graduates of high school and colleges are able to read French and German, what proportion of them are in conversation and correspondence and what the need is for such ability by the average graduate.

The committee will also seek to learn how far the study of language helps toward correct use of English and how far the average American needs French and Italian in order to understand foreign phrases in books and newspapers of the day.
