Man Sentenced to Die On Gallows Refuses To Submit to Operation To Save Him

CHICAGO, June 22.—(AP)—Bernard Grant, fearful of the hangman's noose in spite of the efforts of thousands of persons throughout the country who had signed petitions urging clemency of Gov. Len Small, refused today to permit physicians to perform an operation in the hope of saving his life, and died thirty minutes later. He was stabbed five times Saturday by Walter Krauser, once sentenced with Grant to hang but later granted a new trial.

Grant was taken from the gallows in his neck and chest and placed at the house of correction hospital in a blood transfusion.

"I'll be dead in a little while if you let me alone," said the wounded prisoner, "but I'm saving my life when it's going to be taken from me anyway."

Dr. Frank Jirka pleaded with Grant's resistance did not weaken. Grant, who always insisted he was innocent and that Krauser alone was guilty of the killing of Police Officer Ralph Souders in a holdup in 1922, probably would have been pardoned for his sentence commuted to life imprisonment had Krauser escaped the gallows at his second trial, which was set recently for this week. The supreme court had allowed Krauser's appeal but denied a second hearing to Grant.

Chemists Unable To Identify Poison In Double Suicide

What kind of poison was used by Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Lettitz, 1307 Second avenue, in their suicide pact Thursday night?

That is the question that is puzzling coroner R. A. Vorpahl and local chemists. The coroner declared this morning that no report has been made on the laboratory analysis following the autopsy. Tests were made for the commonly known poisons, but no reaction was obtained, it is said. The method may not be definitely learned and the case go on the records as one of the unsolved mysteries so far as that feature is concerned.

Double funeral services were held for Mr. and Mrs. Lettitz yesterday afternoon. The Rev. Blaine Hyten officiated and burial was in Linwood cemetery.

Intoxicated Car Driver Pays Fine, Faces State Case

The ride of another motorist, said to have been intoxicated when he was trying to drive a car, was cut short by the police at 5 a.m. Sunday.

He was Charles Dolezal, twenty-seventh avenue at J street west. He was spotted in Second street west by police officers, who marked his erratic course his car was taking. Ales was on foot and could not stop the automobile, but telephoned the station and Patrolmen Hughes and Bell were called. The car was stopped and overtook Dolezal in Second street at E avenue west.

In police court today, Dolezal pleaded guilty to the charge of being intoxicated, and was fined $10. He was released on a $100 bond to appear in court on the state charge of driving while intoxicated.

Think Man Lived In Hongkong; Coolies Many Centuries Ago

RENO, Nev., June 22.—Evidence that man existed in western America fifty thousand years ago has been discovered near the Utah-Nevada line, according to word here from members of the Comographic expedition in Eastern Nevada.

A series of six symmetrical reservoirs, sixty feet deep, triangular in shape, some with sides a hundred yards long, and believed to be at least 50,000 years old, were discovered by the explorers, the reports indicated.

According to the opinion of the scientists the reservoirs could only have been constructed by the hand of human beings.

Sediment above the reservoirs would normally have been taken fifty thousand years to accumulate, members of the expedition believe.

Better Sanitary Practices Urged For Meat Dealers

WASHINGTON, June 22.—(US)—Elimination of misleading advertising and unwarranted competition was urged yesterday by the department of agriculture as the need of the retail meat business.

The department advocated also better sanitary practices and a greater knowledge of fundamental business principles as essential to the improvement of retail meat marketing.

"Outstanding examples" of the absence of sanitary methods, the department said, were found in Chicago, Baltimore, Washington, and New Orleans.

Where included in the nation wide survey by the department were New York, Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

NEW SCOUT GROUP ENTERS CAMP TODAY

Forty sunburned campers returned, and forty more happy lads took their places at Camp Misha-waka, the Boy Scout camp near Stone City this morning. The camping period at Waple-Y is nine days instead of six, so the change in occupancy there does not take place until the middle of the week.

Camp Misha-waka is situated on the hill overlooking Stone City, with headquarters in the great stone house built years ago by Senator Greene. The house still contains many of its interesting furnishings. The grounds have been laid out to accommodate a valley ball court, a baseball diamond, besides the long company street, flanked by tents.

The Waple river provides a fine swimming place. A shallow pool in Buffalo river, also nearby, is marked off for the beginner.

Each boy in camp who can not swim is required to wear a yellow ribbon around his neck, and is known as a "dinker." This ribbon can not be removed until he has learned to swim.

L. L. Cunningham, Boy Scout executive, is in charge. Don Dorman of Coe college, is assisting him. Eddie West of St. Ambrose college, an athlete of ability, is in charge of the physical training. The committee in charge of the camp includes Lloyd Derflinger, transportation; Fred Poyner, registration and program; H. R. Green, publicity; Robert P. Green, athletic and scout equipment; Judge Thomas B. Powell, leadership; E. E. Rhodes, camp chairman; and Wardle, president of local council, Boy Scouts of America.

THE FURNITURE ITSELF IS DECORATION ENOUGH

BY MARIAN MOORE

As I have said many times before, your own sleeping room is the place in which you must display all the little personal belongings that have dear associations attached to them, but don't let your fondness for such things run away with your good sense to the extent of turning your own room into a museum.

It is interesting to take trips through museums, but it is extremely tiresome as well, and your museum bedroom not only takes away repose from you yourself, but gives a most unfavorable impression to the others who are bound to see more or less of the room.

Furthermore, it has often been said that a woman is known by her shoes, hats, and gloves. Of course this is true to a certain point, and in exactly the same way it is true of the accessories of your home, clear to the dresser in the furthestmost bedroom. You could hardly blame the former generation who had to live with the cheap commercialized furniture of the day in loading it down with all the souvenirs that were collected, because the furniture was anything but beautiful. But as most of the modern pieces are practically sufficient unto themselves as regards their appearance, it is a pity and extremely poor taste to distract the attention from them with a fussy clutter of atrocities.

The dresser shown here is severely straight lines but is so constructed of a combination of beautiful woods and decorated with a floral motif that only the doll powder boxes and the jewel casket are needed on its top.

New Books At Public Library

ECONOMICS—"Economy of Human Energy," by T. N. Carver. This book is written in order that the people may be encouraged to think of every economic question as a question in the economy of human energy or man power.

ELECTRICITY—"Amateur Electrician's Handbook," by A. E. Collins. This book should prove of service not only to the unskilled amateur, to whom it is addressed, whether boy or man, but to every householder who often needs to know handy facts about his home wiring of various kinds, such as bells, or the electrical side of his automobile.

"Everyday Electricity," by H. T. Wade. This book essays to give the reader an idea of what electricity is in the light of modern science.

GARDENS—"Little Garden For Little Money," by Mrs. K. L. Brewster. A sort of "first aid" in garden books to pains have been spared to make it a practical guide to the inexpensive garden.

"The Culture of Perennials," by K. M. P. Cloud. This book is distinctive in the exceptionally complete and interesting information given, as a result of wide experience on the part of the author.

"Practical Flower Gardening," by K. M. P. Cloud. This book gives complete and practical instructions for the growing of all the leading plants, perennials, bulbs, and annuals, and adequate directions for the general care of the garden.

RELIGION—"Except Ye Be Born Again," by P. Cabot. Mr. Cabot says concerning this book: "Convention is the acid test of effective faith. I have intensely tried here to point out to others the cause of my future that they may avoid my fate."

TOASTS—"Big Toast Book," by C. B. Clout. A compendium of the best new and old toasts, sentiments, quotations and merry quips.

TRAVEL—"Skyline Promenades," by J. B. Atkinson. The main story of camp and tramping journey north through the Forest of the White Mountains.

"Wanderings" in "Southeastern Seas," by Mrs. C. Cameron. An interesting book of travel through Singapore, Malacca, Borneo, Labuan, Kuching, Java, Pango, Pango, Tonga, and Tasmania.

"Egypt," by H. H. Powers. The author is the president of the bureau of antiquities in Egypt. In this book, he has limited himself to the Nile touching on nothing that is not accessible to the traveler on familiar routes and with the ordinary facilities.

The book contains a map and a list of illustrations.

FICTION—"Prairie Fire," by L. D. Beers. The setting for this story is the vast wheat-lands of North Dakota.

"Bronze Collar," by J. Frederick. A romance of Spanish California of the early nineteenth century.

"Before the Dawn," by T. Kagawa. This remarkable book is probably the best piece of serious realistic fiction by a Japanese about the Japanese that has been translated into English.

"Gentleman Adventurer," by M. Keith. Love adventure and fighting in the far north.

"Peasants, Vol. 4, Summer," by L. Reymont. The fourth book in the series. This is a great book. It is great because it is a great story. The daily round of folk life has never been better done.

"Secret Gold," by Mrs. A. M. Williamson. A novel with color, romance and adventure.

"Bond Triumphant," by G. H. Grahame. A brilliant historical romance of the days when Indian warfare still gave life a background of adventure.

SNODGRASS AT THE MAJESTIC TONIGHT

Harry M. Snodgrass, "king of the ivories," who was to have appeared at the City auditorium tonight, will appear at the Majestic instead. When he was booked here the Majestic stage was occupied by the Sherman Players, but they closed their engagement Saturday night, and when Manager William J. Sietz arrived in town with Snodgrass this morning, he immediately switched the engagement to the Majestic. Those who bought seats for the Auditorium may exchange them at the Majestic box office. Many good seats still remain, some at $1.65 including tax and others at $1.10 including tax. Mr. Snodgrass is accompanied by J. M. Witten, noted broadcaster, and a company of fifteen artists. They will give a diversified program, and Mr. Snodgrass will play many of his popular selections which made him a favorite with radio audiences when he was in the Missouri state prison.

Davenport Man Dies Of Burns Inflicted By Wife; She Is Held

DAVENPORT, June 22.—(AP)—John W. Buck, prominent retired Davenport automobile merchant, died last night at Mercy hospital from burns received when during a family quarrel, his wife threw burning gasoline on him. This was on Sunday.

Mr. Buck was arrested this morning on information furnished by the county attorney, charging her with murder.

Since the day of receiving the burns Mr. Buck has been confined in the hospital and his condition has been critical from the first.

A week ago Buck, through his attorneys filed a petition for divorce, setting forth the details of the act of his wife. In a cross bill she admitted throwing the burning liquid on her husband, but said it was due to a hysteria of mind brought about by the fact that her husband had been unfaithful to her.

At the hearing Mrs. Buck failed to appear to substantiate her side of the case and a decree was granted Mr. Buck by default.

The Bucks were married fifteen years ago. It was his second marriage and her third.

DAVENPORT, June 22.—(AP)—Mrs. Eva Hult, 30 years old, wife of Earl P. Hult, and mother of two young children, committed suicide Sunday afternoon during the absence of her husband and children. The coroner has been unable to find a motive for her act.

Disabled Vets Of World War Holding Annual Convention

OMAHA, June 22.—(AP)—Battle scarred "buddies" of the World War met in Omaha today for the fifth annual convention of the Disabled American Veterans.

Today's initial session comprised largely of prayer and tribute to the war dead. A prayer and a tribute that was signified by a period of silence during which there was a simultaneous placing of D. A. V. wreaths on the tombs of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington, Rome, London, Paris and Brussels.

With this tribute of silence, broken by the singing of "Taps" and "The Star Spangled Banner" by Mrs. Schuchman-Hink, herself a gold star war mother. The disabled veterans heard messages of felicitation and encouragement from President Coolidge, Vice-President Dawes, Gen. Pershing, Marshal Foch and others. None of these dignitaries was able to attend the convention and sent the messages of good will by telegraph and mail.

The only business before today's sessions was the appointment of the committee on credentials.

NEW YORK—Establishment of a fund was announced to finance the defense of John T. Scopes in the Dayton, Tenn., evolution trial.

U. S. HAS PLANS TO REVIVE INDIAN ARTS

Public Youths Found To Be Ashamed Of Native Work; Government To Foster Handwork Activity.

BY FREDERICK J. HARMON
Director of The Evening Gazette's Information Bureau.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—The Bureau of Indian Affairs has recently decided to undertake the revival and stimulation of the native arts of the Pueblo Indians in New Mexico. Particular stress is to be laid on embroidery, which art has almost been lost among these tribes. While no definite plan has as yet been devised, the first step will be the appointment of a supervisor of native art. His exclusive duties will consist of encouraging the Indians, both adults and minors, in practicing their native arts.

For some time the bureau have worked on the story of a small Indian girl to whom she gave a piece of wheat sack with the suggestion that she embroider something thereon. A few days later the child had put on it the design of a bunny. It was so well done that it displayed decided talent. This woman said, "Why don't you take another piece of material and in a day or so bring it in with a thunderbird embroidered on it." She had evidently had her father or some older member of her family draw the sketch for her. In one instance where the Indian was persuaded to produce something really representative of him.

A few Indian designs are handed down from generation to generation simply by the older showing or telling the younger, or from articles already made. They have never been preserved in the form of sketches in the manner of the white men. This is one of the reasons for the immediate necessity of reviving this Pueblo art of embroidery if it is not to die out entirely.

One of the outstanding features of the new plan is not only to encourage a return to the native art, but to tie it up to something which has a utility value. The various types of bags, such as are in vogue at the present time, are being made from the pieces of material on which native designs have been embroidered. Also the covers and wall designs have been made.

Back To Indian Methods

The wheat sacks used in this work are made of coarse, loosely woven material. At first when making the bags the ends were merely sewed together, but now they are sewed so that they can be folded over and then it was suggested that this was the way the white woman would do it. The Indian would have woven the ends so that the bag was all in one piece. Therefore the ends were sewed in this fashion. Thus they had a truly Indian product, but with something which was useful and saleable.

Under the proposed plan the supervisor of native art will go from village to village and give talks to those who display interest. He will in no way attempt to instruct these people. In fact he will be a guide and possibly be fitted to do this. The idea is simply by encouraging talks and co-operation in the way of furnishing the materials, and possibly a market, to inspire the Pueblo to revive and further develop their native art. The material will be furnished by the government. The Indian will be paid for his labor, and the article placed on sale by the government. The government does not mean to undertake to establish a permanent market for the wares of the Indian. This is done simply to aid in the general development of the Indian. The fact that he can realize on his handwork is a great incentive to the Indian.

A girl who has made a bag or a table cover is not required to turn it over to the government for sale. If she finds a sale for it, she may pay the government for the raw material, and the article becomes her own. If she prefers she may buy the material outright and do as she pleases with the article after it is completed. It is not planned that this shall become a part of the school curriculum. It is for busy workers that is work for girls to pick up during leisure time, just as it is the dream from time to time for white girls to spend odd moments making handkerchiefs or knitting sweaters.

In Perspective In View

It is believed that this work will accomplish several things. It will help the Indian girl to economic independence. It will give her something to do with her spare time and keep her out of mischief. Girls returning from school and from the reservation are likely to turn to means of entertainment, which to say the least, are not improving.

It is also thought that such a contact between the government and the Indians will aid in establishing a more sympathetic reception of other agencies at work for their betterment.

It has already been arranged for an exhibit of the work of the Pueblo at the Santa Fe Fiesta to be held in August. This of course will include not only their embroideries but pottery for which they are famous. Many of these are made from a bluish clay and decorated with white, red, and a brown that is almost black. At Acoma there are two Indian artists who are renowned for their black pottery. This is unadorned and depends on grace of form and some times a small molding for ornamentation. Many of these vessels make lovely lamp bases, and one exhibited showed a flower bowl and four candlesticks for a luncheon table.

Although the Pueblos as a whole do little weaving, it was from them that the Navajos learned this art which has made them famous. They also make baskets of varied forms from native plants. Most of the basketry at this time is done by the women. Also one of the best Navajo potters is a woman whose modesty has not been spoiled by her fame. She will stop work on an exquisite water jar and in a matter of fact make a small bowl for her husband. She appears totally unimpressed by the adulations of visitors.

The Bureau of Indian Affairs far plans to extend to other Indian tribes this development of native arts. However, the work among the Pueblos has not progressed beyond the formative stage as yet. It will depend largely on the success met among these tribes as to just how far the work will be carried on.

Recently the United States has been flooded with the native arts of Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Italy and many other countries. People have developed a craze for these articles. It seems an excellent time to begin this work of stimulating the native arts of the first Americans, and acquainting the public with the many beautiful and artistic things which are truly representative of their own country.
